Dear Madame Goldschmidt,

I was very much engaged just now and could only reply very hurriedly to your note.

I now enclose your letter of the 3.^d and entreat you to take it back. It is so unlike you, and so painful to me, that it ought not to remain in existence. It has hurt me more than any letter I can receive, and I could not shake hands with you tomorrow (as I hope to do) if it were still in my possession.

I have made you all the apology in my power, and I think I am not asking anything unjustifiable, when I beg you to destroy the enclaves, and let us be as if it had never been written.

Was my friend
